The Forming of Ancient Chinese Villages

The forming of Chinese Villages was based upon none other than Feng Shui principles. The accessibility to the site via road or sea should be considered as priority with the source of water as prime concern. These criteria matched Feng Shui principle if one studied and analyzed the subject with extra details. Feng Shui principles with the emphasis of seeing water as 'wealth', and come to think about it, the essence is the water source for consuming as well as for growing agricultural produces. The second important criteria are the mountain at rear for health reason that protects the gusty wind from entering the house.
